

THE DAILY CITIZEN.
The Citizen is the most extensively circulated and widely read newspaper in Western North Carolina.
Its discussion of public men and measures is in the interest of public integrity, honest government, and prosperous industry, and it knows no personal allegiance treating public men.
The Citizen publishes the dispatches of the Associated Press, which covers the whole world in its scope. It has other facilities of advanced journalism for gathering news from all quarters, with everything carefully edited to occupy the smallest space.
Specimen copies of any edition will be sent free to any one sending the address.
Terms—Daily, $6 for one year, $3 for six months; 50 cents for one month; 15 cents for one week. Carriers will deliver the paper in every part of the city to subscribers, and parties wanting it will please call at the Citizen's office.
ADVERTISING RATES—Reasonable, and made known on application at this office. All transient advertisements must be paid in advance.
Reading notices ten cents per line. (Ordinary, marriage and society notices fifty cents each (not exceeding ten lines) or fifty cents per inch.)

RETRIBUTION.
There is a line somewhere, and possibly some of our readers have stumbled upon it, about the mills of the gods &c.—we do not propose to quote it—but it comes up suggestively in association with a kind of retributive justice which seems to be overtaking New England in these latter days. That retribution falls upon its population and upon its religion. New England was settled by the salt of the earth, the most exclusive of nation-alists, the most intolerant of religionists. It is very true that the first who came "to the wild New England shore" could not have come in very amiable mood; they came as fugitives from political and religious intolerance; and they came to encounter hardships which no doubt tried their souls, perhaps soured their tempers. But they ought not to plead those hardships as reasons for the hardships they visited with so much delight on others. They found themselves in the position most to be desired by those "persecuted for righteousness sake"; they had beautiful opportunity of returning evil for good, and of turning the other cheek to the smiter. It does not appear that they did it then, or that they have ever done it since. They went right on their way, smiting the heathen, hip and thigh, improving them out of the land with all despatch; and having done that to their full contentment, turned upon the unhappy beings of their own race, also fugitives from tyranny and religious persecution, worshippers of the same God, but worshipping often under a different ritual. The Springfield Republican endeavors to extenuate the expulsion of the Baptists and Quakers from Massachusetts, the first and most powerful of the Puritan colonies, under the plea of priority of possession, and the statement that no one was forced to accompany them. The first comes back, in effect, to the old claim, "the land belongs to the saints; we are the saints; therefore the land is exclusively ours." The other is inconsistent with the liberality and charity expected of those who, suffering themselves, might have been taught to respect the sufferings of others. But they did not; and the Baptists and the Quakers went forth as exiles into their own new wilderness, leaving nothing behind for the Puritans to persecute except the witches, and some poor unfortunate who might be compelled to wear the Scarlet Letter, and publicly submit to the scorn and reproach of heartless censurers.

The Republican says:
"The State they founded was theological rather than theocratic, and the intolerance practiced from the start was the granting of leave to withdraw from the colony in cases where so-called heresy became offensive to the community. When a man settled in a New England plantation of the 17th century he knew that his continued residence depended upon certain beliefs. It was when he turned Quaker or Baptist and still clung to his residence that he was excommunicated."
This so far from justification, is condemnation. Modern thought and feeling can enter with no sympathy into that bigoted exclusiveness, which, drawing no lesson from its own bitter experience, visited upon the persecuted of other creeds, the sin, that had been visited upon themselves. With a protest against intolerance as practiced upon themselves, with a broad, new clear field upon which to put in practice the noblest theories and principles of wise and generous liberality, there can be little forgiveness for those who practiced with alacrity the teachings of their own persecutors, and exaggerated them with every refinement of cold and calculating cruelty. It is heartless attempts at exoneration of the bigoted Puritan to say that when a man was of another belief, he knew the penalties that awaited him. He ought to have known nothing of the kind. He ought more naturally to have believed that sufferings in the same fiery ordeal would have drawn them to each other in the closest bonds of sympathy.

The Puritan built up his commonwealth after his own heart by tearing up and weeding out all the elements of noxious growth. He made a commonwealth that has made its mark upon history. But that mark he could only inscribe to a certain depth. It is wearing out. It is threatened with speedy effacement. Race, habits, creeds, are fast fading away; and the time seems to be coming when the Puritans will survive only as a historical reminiscence and a theological nightmare.
From an article in the Forum by Mr. A. L. Bartlett, a New Englander, we make the following extract:
"A century ago there was scarcely to be found a foreigner in Massachusetts. To-day out of a population of 1,242,110, the foreign-born number 527,867, not including such children of alien parentage that were born in the United States. Of 122,263 illiterate persons of ten years or over, nearly 80 per cent. are of foreign birth. The foreign-born represent one-fifth of the people employed in the fisheries, two-fifths of those employed in manufacturing, and two-thirds of those employed in mining and as laborers. At the close of the revolution there was scarcely a corporal's guard of Roman Catholics in all New England. To-day they claim to be 1,211,000 in a population of 4,500,000. Two great currents of immigration, the earlier from ill-starred Ireland, the later from the French provinces of Canada, have made a marked change, not only in the population, but in the ecclesiastical status, the political position and the probable future of New England. The Irish immigration in large numbers began in 1847, the Canadian French immigration twenty years later."

THE SCUPPERNON GRAPE.
A very interesting article on the above, and other grapes indigenous to North Carolina, from the pen of Capt. J. K. Hoyt, a most accomplished vigneron of this section, will be found on our first page. It is called forth by our statement that the famous Scuppernon grape, as such, is not a native of Roanoke Island, and was not the grape found there when the colony of Sir Walter Raleigh landed. We are not one to disparage North Carolina, or any of her parts or sections, in her or their claims to pre-eminence in anything; and most certainly this State will have something to be very proud of, when the phyloxera having extirpated the European vineyards and dried up its wine vats, the Scuppernon grape will be the great fountain head of all wine, and the Southern States the great vineyard of the world; for the days of appreciation of the scuppernon wine are surely coming. But this is not to the point. We asserted, on what we believed good authority, that the scuppernon grape was not a native of Roanoke Island. But we recognized the fact that it grows there in unequalled perfection, and had evidently grown there a long time, as proved by the great size of the vine or vines to which Mr. Hoyt refers. But the tradition tracing them back to the colonists of Sir Walter Raleigh—Capt. John White's—proves nothing. That settlement was made somewhere between 1584 and 1590. It disappeared, from existence, from history, from tradition. It left nothing to hang a tradition upon. After its total disappearance, there was a great gap made which was never filled; the thread of the history of Roanoke Island was not taken up again until near the middle of the seventeenth century. There could not therefore possibly have been a tradition that the vines now on the island are the same found there by the early colonists.
Dr. M. A. Curtis says that the vines on the island bear evidence of being planted there by the hand of man. Their great size and vast spread is no evidence of great age; for with favoring soil and climate, and proper aid in providing supports, the scuppernon is a very rapid grower, the ease with all its large foliage, the vitis vulpina, which includes the common dark skinned bullace or muscadine, and the highly prized, though also dark, Misch, Flowers, Alexander, and perhaps other varieties. It is the light or amber colored scuppernon which now grows so finely in Roanoke Island, and for which the inhabitants of the island claim such illustrious association, that we stated had a recent origin. We did so on long indefinite belief, and also upon the authority of Dr. Hunter and Dr. Curtis, both of whom spoke from knowledge. The Rev. Dr. Forbes, now an aged clergyman, well known to Mr. Hoyt, says that the white variety of the scuppernon was found some time during the last century by two men clearing land near Columbia, Tyrrell county, on the east side of Scuppernon river, and observing the character of the grape, preserved the tree and vine, and from thence the stock was propagated.

There is another tradition that fixes the date of the discovery of this variety. It is said that the Rev. Charles Pettigrew, the first Episcopal bishop elect of North Carolina, though never consecrated as such, found in 1774 several vines of the scuppernon on the low ground of the river at that name. Dr. Hunter obtained knowledge of this tradition.
One fact seems to prove the recent origin of this variety, and that is the modern date of its general diffusion through the eastern counties of this State and thence through the South. In counties where it is now found on every farm, we do not remember to have seen it up to our arrival nearly to manhood, its northern and western limits are rigidly defined. It will not thrive in Virginia or farther North, nor in this State with any certainty west of Orange county. Even there severe cold weather kills it, as in 1880-1.

The average cost of equipped railroad per mile in this country in 1887, according to Poor's manual, was $55,059. The capital stock liberality per mile was $29,847; the bonded debt per mile was $29,155. The cost per mile in 1882 was $57,245. In 1887, the last year for which we have any statistics, cost per mile of road equipped was $72,699. The tendency since 1880 has been toward reduction of the cost of railroads, consequent on cheaper rails, improvements in grading, the bridge building appliances and material reducing the cost of those items, and cheaper rolling stock. The cost per mile of equipped road in England is about double that in this country, which is largely to be accounted for by the fact that English roads go straight regardless of hills, hollows or streams, and by the larger amount of equipment per mile required on the English roads.

Dr. Parker Prays from Van-Old, Rosaline, Ongline and Diamond nail powder having now become the ladies' favorites, at F. L. Jacob's drug store, these popular medicinal articles may always be found, together with pocket emery board, or orange wood sticks, nail scissors, files and other such requisites. Also a complete line of drugs and toilet articles, in addition to the Hebe Soda Fountain from which ice cold drinks are dispensed. Corner Main Street and Patton Avenue.

The war being waged by the fanatics of the Sudan in southern Egypt is declared to be for "the conquest of the world," but its results thus far are hardly satisfactory to the Mahdi's successor. A thousand or more of his dervishes have been lost in battle about Wady Halfa, or have perished of thirst in the desert. The Egyptians with their gunboats have command of the Nile, and co-operating with the land force under English officers, they succeed pretty well in keeping the Arabs from water. The latter persist, however, in their efforts, and so large are their forces that English regiments are being sent from Malta to reinforce the battalions already on the Nile. This religious movement in the Sudan is one of the wonders of our day.

THE RACKET COLUMN.
KEEPING IT UP!!

We tried to write our advertisement announcing our gift of Lawn Dresses so plainly that no one could misunderstand it. We have never meant that we would give a Lawn Dress with One Dollar's worth of any of our goods sold, but only with a Dollar's worth of Dress goods, and we especially excepted White Goods. Our reasons were these: We are going to quit keeping all kinds of Dress Goods, except White Goods, and in order to clear them out we give these Lawns away. Lots of Ladies have availed themselves of our offer, but we have quite a pile of the Lawn yet which we shall continue to give away, while at the same time we sell the Dress Goods that go with it at cost. Our stock of White Goods, Flouncings, Lawns, India Linens, plain and dotted Swisses, Barred Muslins, and other thin goods suitable for the season is very large, and we guarantee the prices to be as low as those of anybody. Our White Goods, Embroideries, Hamburgs, Laces and Edgings are all new, fresh goods. No need to clean them after you get them, but new goods, and sold as low as others that are fly-specked and shop-worn, and in many cases lower. If people will examine before they buy we will be content. We wish we could impress upon our people the fact that our store is the place to buy their Shoes. We probably have the largest stock in town outside of a regular shoe store, from a Ladies' Pebble Goat, button, that we warrant solid leather, top, bottom, inside and out, for $1.25, to a fine French Kid. We have a Man's Shoe in Lace and Congress—the "Racket Shoe"—which we have made. We sell them at $2, and will match them with any shoe sold in Asheville for $2.50, guaranteeing ours to be equal in quality, style and fit. Of course we keep all the cheaper grades, both for men and women, suitable for rough wear, and when we can get people to price them we rarely fail to sell. We have a full-sized Mexican Grass Hammock for $1.68 worth $2. Lots of cheaper ones also. Hammock Stretches 15 cts. each. 2, 3, 4, 6 and 8-quart Ice Cream Freezers, every one warranted as good as any made, and where after trial they fail to give perfect satisfaction we return the money. Prices begin at $1.58 for 2 quarts. We have a few suits of light weight clothing which we are anxious to sell, not anxious enough to sell them at cost, but willing to sell them lower than any man in Asheville will match them for. We keep everything and only ask that you see whether we have what you want before you buy. Another supply of Matches, 25c. per dozen boxes of 300s—others ask 25c. for 200s.
Go to all the stores and price goods if you wish to. We only ask that you will not buy until you have priced ours.
Respectfully,
GEO. T. JONES & CO.,
N. Y. Office, 466 Broadway.
